Note: While this diagram shows drinking water is a potential pathway for human exposure to PFAS, EWEB’s monitoring data shows PFAS has not been detected in the treated drinking water, the McKenzie River, nor the lower watershed streams.