EWEB's riverfront acres open for public tour

Community members interested in riverfront development possibilities will have a chance to walk the Eugene Water & Electric Board's 27 acres on Wednesday.

The utility plans to move its operations and maintenance functions to west Eugene and will pay for the move by selling a portion of its land along the Willamette River.

The Wednesday meeting is the first of several inviting public participation in the development of a master plan guiding redevelopment of the property.

The "behind the fences" tour begins at 6 p.m. at the North Building, 500 E. Fourth Ave., followed by a background presentation and group discussions on possible future uses for the property. Those attending should wear comfortable shoes to walk the site. Child care, assisted listening and Spanish translation are available with advance notice.
